PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION

- Parenthetical documentation is also known as “internal documentation”
- It tells your reader where you got your information
- Appears in the text of your paper

Parenthetical Documentation: MLA Style Diagram

Citing a source when the author’s name is in your sentence. According to Jim Smith, “Pit bulls are bad dogs to own”	List only the page number in parentheses at the end of the sentence According to Jim Smith, “Pit bulls are bad dogs to own” (82).
Citing a book in a research paper. Example: you wish to cite page 200 in a book by author David Smith	Author and page number (Smith 200).
Citing a website with an author but no page numbers. The author is Kenneth Fitzgerald.	Author and if given, page or section number of a website. (Fitzgerald)
Citing a website without an author but with page numbers. The Internet article is called “All About Elvis.”	First word or two in article title in quotes. Page or section numbers, if given. (“All About” 17)

No page number: use author’s last name

No author: use shortened title (main words) in quotes.

If several facts from the same page of a source are used in a row in the research paper, place the parenthetical documentation after the last fact.
